

Matthew Montehermoso

COGS 118C

Richard Gao

R2 Reading Question

As shown in this experiment, it is possible to map functions of the brain such as sensorimotor movements by pairing repetitive motor tasks with the corresponding areas that they activate.

Would experimenters follow a similar procedure when trying to map other functions that are more complex than motor functions (ie. emotions, planning, vision, etc)? If not what might they do differently?